big ones. The head must be set in the frill of white and the hands framed with the same. Pictures seen make the women lock like a kind of pigeon which has a frill of feathers. With me puffs going down to the elbows on sleeves, the neck encased in ruffs, there is some difficulty in finding a wrap. The coats are impossible with the sleeves, and capes impossible with the necks. The wrap genius will have to appear in order that the women of fashion shall have something to wear around her these cold winter days.

A young woman of North Meridian street declares that she will not get married until hour, so she has made up her mind that the time table will have considerable influence on her as to whether she gets mar-ried or not. As the young woman has numerous callers and never tacks for company to anything to which she may be invited it is altogether probable that time tables will not mar her prospects of happiness when the time comes.

A popular young lady, who is invited to of the season, has declared against going idea of drinking hot tea, coffee or chocolate and then taking an ice which is as The mixture one finds on the luncheon or of eating as well as the enjoyment of it. For her part, she is going to limit her refreshments to one or the other, and not both. Added to the hot drink and the cold ice there is the beverage known by the name of punch, which is more or less acid. She recalls with horror a day she went to a reception and was given some kind of preparation with whipped cream over it, and when the two ran together in the bottom of the cup they were all curdled. She is a hot-tea or coffee woman for the winter

A party of ladies were talking "dress" and recalling experiences. One said: "I had a terrible time one evening when I went to Mrs. J.'s party. There were ever told me my hair was still up. I beat a asty retreat." Another one said: "My worst experience was going to church one day with my bonnet on hindside before. I went home and, looking in the glass, saw it. I asked my husband why he had not told me and he said he never noticed it was wrong-he supposed that was the style." A third recalled the time when she went to the theater without her back hair and discovered the fact during the second act. Her escort would not let her go out and so she sat there, but she has no idea what the
